BART directors try to hire election aide

By JUSTIN ROBERTS

The BART President's election campaign manager, Jerry Jackson, is in line for a $15,000 aide's position with the Bay Area Rapid Transit District, The Times has learned.

BART President Richard O. Clark of Oakland, on Jan. 2 sent a memorandum to other directors telling them he planned to ask members of the district administration committee to recommend the appointment of an aide to the board president when they meet at 9 a.m. Monday.

Clark said in his memo that he viewed the additional employe as aiding in research, communications and other functions. He also said he proposed that the aide to the board president be rated as a staff assistant, Grade 4 at a starting salary of $1,250 per month and also be entitled to use a staff car provided by BART.

What Clark did not say in his memo was that he and other directors plan to appoint Jackson.

In addition to being Clark's campaign manager, Jackson was considered "coordinator" of the campaigns of Walnut Creek BART Director James Hill, Elmer Cooper and Edna Hill Hutch, both of San Francisco, and Dr. Harvey Glasser of Alameda County. All five won election to the transit district's first elective board Nov. 5.

The five have been referred to as a "platform" before their election and have been termed a "coalition" since taking their posts on the board.

Jackson, 36, a former school teacher, worked as secretary to Judy Biggs, administrative assistant to Assemblyman William Lockyer, D-Alameda, holding the post for about six months last year.

Although Jackson enjoys no official status at BART, he had been present at most directors' meetings for several weeks prior to the November election and has been present at official gatherings of BART directors since the election.

Jackson, an informant reports, admitted at a Dec. 19 Christmas party in a union hall at 522 Grand Ave., Oakland, that he had "five votes sewed up" for the BART job which was revealed in the Jan 2 memo from Clark to other directors. He also confided that he knew the salary he was slated to be paid. Although he is not employed at BART, he was wearing a badge with his name and BART inscribed on it at the time.

The five votes would presumably be those of Clark, Hill, Glasser, Hutch and Cooper — members of the so - called coalition and beneficiaries of Jackson's election campaign help.

Jackson has been operating from the real estate and property management offices of Grubb and Ellis in Oakland, where Clark holds an executive position.

Walnut Creek BART Director James Hill was reported "on vacation" by his office late Friday and was unavailable for comment.

However, Contra Costa County's other BART director, Nello Bianco of Richmond who had not seen the memorandum at the time, said, "We can't allow that sort of thing. I'm sure that when (State) Sen. John Nejedly and Assemblyman Dan Boatwright and the Legislature supported the elective process for choosing BART directors, they did not intend for patronage and political reward by directors any more than they intended for some directors to take over and operate under the same methods we blamed Bill Stokes, the former general manager and his cohorts on the old board for.

"I have no intention of supporting this plan under any circumstances. I was board president last year and never felt the need of a president's aide," Bianco added.

Another director, John Glenn of Fremont, administration committee member, commented, "I was shocked and dismayed to receive this memorandum. In order to serve on the BART board, Clark resigned as mayor of Albany. That should leave him with adequate time to perform the duties he promised the voters of his district he would perform in their behalf and in behalf of the entire district."

Clark was not available at his office.

BART's administration committee consists of Ms. Hutch as chairperson, Glasser and Glenn — and the prospects are that Glenn's opposition Monday will be defeated by a 2-1 vote.

The same five directors described as a coalition tried to stage a "deficit dinner" last Dec. 13 to raise money to pay their campaign expenses by inviting guests at $30 per plate. Among those invited to attend were key BART officials and BART suppliers. The dinner was called off after the press exposed the plan.

The Inside Story

Plaque commemorates Indian burial ground

Consent ye, mother of the earth, warrior father, or the yellow sun, grandfather of the winter moon, the wind and the rain. We stand together today in memory of the 35 brothers who have passed on. Although their earth bodies can no longer touch the trees, smell the fresh air or be warmed by the sun, we will forget them not, for their footprints are visible upon the ground and they can never be erased . . . Consent ye all, we implore, make smooth the path where they shall travel on even beyond the four hills.

With that solemn prayer, American Indian Society members yesterday dedicated a large plaque marking the spot where they interred the bones of 35 Indians a month ago.

The ceremony took place in the Century Park site on Santa Rita Road, Pleasanton — not far from the Pleasanton Meadows fields where most of the old bones were found over the past two years.

The Indian burial site is near a grove of trees. Mounted on the newly unveiled plaque is an acrylic painting, by an undisclosed Livermore artist, showing the artist's conception of what an Indian village in Pleasanton may have looked like 1,500 to 3,000 years ago.

Although not many traces of the ancient settlers have been uncoverd by archaeologists, enough is known about California Indians in general to suggest a lifestyle that may have prevailed in the Valley during Indian days.

According to an account mounted on the big plaque, members of the Yokut Indian nation inhabited the area. They lived off the land, eating the many varieties of game, nuts and berries, roots and tubers that grew in the area and building their homes with bent branches and mud.

Permanently inscribed on the memorial are names of people in various walks of life who helped the Indian Society arrange for burial of the old bones in the park. The names listed are Roland W. Prahl, Alameda County deputy coroner; Robert M. Pierson, past mayor of Pleasanton; Alan B. Campbell, Pleasanton assistant city manager; Robert Pritchard, mayor of Livermore; Robin Gordon and Joe Chavoen, archaeologists with the Cal State, Hayward, department of anthropology; Richard Cragin, attorney in San Leandro; and the Federal Sign and Signal Corp. of Oakland, who donated the large plaque.

Also listed are the burial committee, including Leah Avila, Bernard B. Beachine, Edwin and Maria Butts, Joseph and Lee Canevari, Patricia Kennedy, Jo-Ann Pecoraro and Gail Stewart.

School board battles everywhere but Sunol

Late filings heat up school races

A flood of last-day filings has assured a race in every Valley school district save Sunol Glen School District.

Among those filing Friday at either the Superintendent of Schools office or Registrar of Voters office were Dr. Geraldine Donaldson, current president of the Pleasanton Elementary board, for the Amador Valley Joint High School District board, Alfred Thome for the Pleasanton Elementary board, incumbent Joe Schwab on the Pleasanton Elementary board, Edward Spies, 8103 Cardiff Dr., Murray Elementary School board, Ed Butts, 263 Nadine St., Livermore, and incumbent Demetra Wilson, Livermore Unified School District board.

Filing a day before the deadline was Hank Schneider, a current member of the Sunol Glen School board. He is the only person filing for the one seat to be open at the March 4 elections.

Two seats are open on both the Pleasanton and Amador boards, and three on the Murray board.

Dr. Donaldson's entry into the Amador race makes it a four - way battle with incumbents Charles Beazley and Mayo Miller and newcomer Douglas V. Dollard also contending. Dollard, 29, is a teacher at the Eden Vocational School in the San Lorenzo School District. He has been a teacher for three years. A graduate of Florida Atlantic College in Boca Raton, Fla., Dollard is a former member of the U.S. Marine Corps and holds memberships in the Pleasanton Meadows Homeowners Association and San Lorenzo chapter of the California Teachers Association.

He and his wife, Karen, and 3-year old son have resided in Pleasanton since September.

Five persons will seek the two seats open on the Pleasanton board. Previously filing were Dr. Raymond Serafin, Betty Nostrand and Jack Pearson.

The Murray board race finds just one incumbent, Robert Foster, and five other challengers, Peter W. Snyder, Eugene S. Hinton, Judy Cuesta, Ann Henderson and Edward Spies.

Three candidates will seek the two spots open on the Livermore school board. In addition to the two incumbents, Ken Engelund and Demetra Wilson, who filed Friday, Betty Carrell and Ed Butts, of 263 Nadine St., will bid for positions.

Kindly chemist plans to burn down cottage

Charges against a Sunol chemist who tried to be a "good samaritan" will go up in flames sometime in the next two weeks.

Tired of hassling with the Alameda County Building Department, Dr. James Wrede has made arrangements with the state Division of Forestry to have the torch put to the cottage on his property at 12181 Foothill Rd. in Sunol.

Wrede's troubles began in early November when he offered the cottage, which had been condemned, as a temporary home for a family which had been burned out of their residence.

An Alameda County building inspector brought charges against Wrede for allowing the family to live in the substandard dwelling on Nov. 9.

The family found other lodging but the county refused to drop the charges against Wrede unless the cottage was made completely uninhabitable to prevent a reoccurence of the incident.

The Wrede's attorney, John Vasil, said the family had disconnected the electricity and gas in the cottage but that was not enough to satisfy the building department.

"We just got tired of it," said Mrs. Wrede Friday, "and we called up the Division of Forestry and asked if they wanted to burn it as a training exercise."

Mrs. Wrede added they have given wood from part of the cottage to friends for firewood and the remainder will be burnt to the ground within the next two weeks.

Then, the charges against Wrede will be dropped, according to Vasil.

Mrs. Wrede said she Plans to "invite all of Alameda County to bring their hot dos and marshmallows to watch the controversial cottage go up in smoke.

Robbery reported at Amador High School

Seven fire extinguishers were stolen sometime Wednesday night or early Thursday morning and 50 student lockers pried open at Amador High School, Pleasanton, according to police reports.

Robert D. Demier, grounds keeper, discovered the burglary and vandalism at 8 a.m., Thursday. The school had been closed for the Christmas holidays.

Authorities value the extinguishers at $245, and are checking with students for possible thefts from the lockers.

Pleasanton police reports also record the theft of a seat and lever knobs from a "Back Hoe" tractor parked in a field behind the Shell station on Hopyard.

Driver training for police more than just parallel parking

By RON RODRIGUEZ

When Cam Miller sticks the nose of his full-sized Dodge into a 90 degree left-hand corner at 35 mph you swear he's lost it. The right front fender dips hard as the rear starts to break loose. You look over in incredible disbelief and he's off the brake and on the throttle.

He steers to the right — into the drift — with a subtlety, ease, and expertise that effortlessly aims the car down the straight and into the next corner.

Another quick, hard left and you tear toward the chicane. This time, no brakes; it's all throttle control with those slight, subtle movements on the wheel. Dip left, dip right, and you're out and headed for yet another tight turn.

Steve McQueen take note: don't ever speed in Hayward.

Cameron Miller has been running his rookies through the course on the Alameda County Fairgrounds' parking lot for a year now, first the "rookie course," then the "advanced course," and finally the "advanced-advanced course.

The last is the one with the no-brake 'esses,' and the water truck that sprays a corner while you're on the opposite end of the track.

That's if it's not raining. Then they don't bring the truck.

Nothing stops Cam's classes.

"If there were ice on the road, we'd use chains and run it that way," he says. And you know he's not kidding.

He started racing in 1938. "Sprints, midgets, dirt tracks. Anything I could get my hands on," he adds.

He was kidnapped in 1953 and escaped by rolling out of the car at 30 mph. A few months later he lost the strength in his left arm. It just went limp one day while he was driving. He hasn't raced since, even though his arm is now all right.

He's been with the Hayward Police Department for 25 years, all but one of them spent on the traffic detail. You can see why.

He's an artist behind the wheel of that big, brawny Dodge, and he's been teaching his students — not only the rookies, but all of the department from Lieutenants down — at both the Fairgrounds and the Hayward airport for the past year.

In that time, he's quick to add, there's been a 40 percent reduction in patrol car accidents, and a 60 percent reduction in "preventable" patrol car accidents. The latter are judged by the department to be those mishaps which could have been avoided, "with proper training."

Students aren't allowed to run their hands past the 12 o'clock position on the wheel, so he teaches them two-handed driving with the wheel held lightly at 4 and 8 o'clock.

"If the patrolman's got the microphone in his hand when he's driving and he crosses over the top of the wheel he's liable to wrap the cord around the steering column and either lose control of the car or his mike. And that mike can save his life."

That's what makes it look so effortless. The hands lightly holding the wheel at 4 and 8, the fast, firm pressure on the brakes, the smooth acceleration that brings him not around but through the turn.

Magnificent — and perfectly safe.

MAGNIFICENT — AND PERFECTLY SAFE

A sewer's pipedream

A Hopyard Road project that will provide additional sewer capacity for Pleasanton and Valley Community Services District began Friday under supervision of Clayton Solvang and the McQuire and Hester Construction Company of Oakland. The project involves repairs to pipelines that have allowed seepage of heavily mineralized water into the local sewer system. (Times Photo)

Superior Court justice named

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan appointed a lobbyist for a district attorneys' organization and a vice chancellor of the state college system to judgeships Saturday.

With less than two days left in his term in office, Reagan named Carl W. Anderson, a lobbyist for the District Attorneys and County Counsels Association of California, to fill a vacant spot on the Alameda County Superior Court.

He also picked Norman L. Epstein, vice chancellor and general counsel of the California State Colleges and Universities, to fill a seat on the Los Angeles Municipal Court. Anderson, a Piedmont resident who is a senior trial deputy in the Alameda County district attorney's office, will replace Judge Lewis Sherman, who died last year.

A native of Monterey Park, Anderson graduated from the University of California at Berkeley in 1957 and his law degree from the university's Boalt Hall in 1962. The 39 - year - old attorney has been a lobbyist for the district attorneys since 1966.

Anderson's annual salary will be $40,322.

Epstein, a 41 - year - old UCLA graduate, will succeed Judge Edward Hinz Jr., who was elevated to the superior court.

The new municipal court judge, who will be paid $37,098 a year, joined the state college system in 1962 and was named vice chancellor and general counsel of the system in 1970.

Increased service set for Dublin BART buses

DUBLIN — Full service at 15 minute intervals will begin Monday for Bay Area Rapid Transit feeder bus riders from Dublin to the Walnut Creek BART station.

The new system will provide local stops during express runs from 5:30 and 6:45.

The express buses formerly stopped only at the termination intersection of Dublin Boulevard and Regional Street.

The new system will also include a stop at Crow Canyon Road and San Ramon Valley Boulevard. Earlier scheduling terminated some Walnut Creek-Dublin buses at the junction of San Ramon Valley Boulevard and Greenbrook Road.

The changes are part of BART's six-month trial system BART officials would change in accordance with needs of the commuter.

"We feel this new adjustment on the D-line will offer a much better option for evening commuters who travel the between BART's Walnut Creek station and Dublin," said BART planner Ray Ceder.

The morning schedule on the line remains unchanged with some buses making express runs. Mid-day and evening buses will continue to run hourly.

For further information and schedules call 462-BART.

Maria Bernal Kottinger

The bandit liked her style

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a continuing series of vignettes and sketches focusing on noteworthy women in the pages of valley history, to celebrate International Women's Year 1975.

By JEAN McKENNA

The episode has become an old family story retold four generations later by her great-grandson:

Dona Maria de Bernal y Kottinger had risen very early that morning to see the men well-nourished for their day's journey and safely away.

Her husband and her father, with several ranch hands, galloped away under cover of darkness with the gold, payment for cattle they had sold to miners in the Mother Lode country. Their fortune would be secure in the banks of San Faancisco.

Shortly after they departed, the thing Dona Maria most feared happened — had her prayers not been heard that morning? The sound of an approaching rider, the clink of spurs on the porch and the tall shadow of Murietta crossed the doorway.

Legends of ruthlessness and evil would wrap themselves around this Mexican who had declared war on American law. Dona Maria knew Murietta had a price on his head for murder and theft, but she had also known him as a laborer on her uncle's rancho years before. To Dona Maria, he was less fearsome and more of a nuisance, although she always treated him with caution and tact.

"Buenos dias, Joaquin." She flashed a smile as she searched her mind frantically for a way to stall him. He knew her husband, John, had just returned from the cattle drive into the mountains, and if he suspected John and her father had just left with the gold, he would be after them. Kottinger represented the hated American law.

John and her father were on their way to San Francisco with the gold. They needed time.

She would offer him breakfast! Dona Maria was known for her easy-going and generous hospitality, and such an offer was nothing unusual. After all, she was of Spanish descent, as he was, and Joaquin harbored no ill will against his own people.

But the food set before him was soon dispatched, the household gossip soon exhausted, and Murietta rose to go. At wits end to detain him, perhaps Maria began to hum. Or she may have teasingly asked him to play a favorite melody on the guitar.

As the music started, slippered feet stamped on the board floor, castenets clicked, and skirts swished to a flirtatious fandango.

The young girl danced and sang for Murietta well into the day, so that by the time he finally rode off, she knew John Kottinger's party had escaped through Dublin canyon to the Bay and was safely on a boat.

Dona Maria was in her early twenties at the time of this story, about 1852. She had met and married John Kottinger, an Austrian lawyer and teacher, in 1850. The following year she had left her family's Rancho Santa Teresa near San Jose to live in the newly-completed adobe Kottinger had built for his bride.

(The house was built on the site of the future town of Pleasanton, and stood on the hill near the corner of Main and Ray Streets.)

If John Kottinger, who named the town, has been called "Father of Pleasanton," then Maria Refugia Agosta de Bernal y Kottinger was surely its mother. For the favorable area of Pleasanton proper was part of her generous dowry of 4500 acres of land and cattle which passed into Kottinger's hands upon their marriage from her wealthy father, Juan Pablo Bernal.

When Mexican law decreed California landowners must live on their land to keep possession of it, the Kottinger's left the comfortable town of San Jose and settled in what was then a marshy wilderness. There were few neighbors: the Amadors of San Ramon and the Livermores of Las Positas far to the north, and Maria's uncle Agostin Bernal several miles away.

Maria was not raised to be a pioneer, having received the gentle upbringing proper for the daughter of a noble don. She learned to embroider, to dance and play the zither, pastimes she loved all her life. And like the rest of her family, she was very religious.

Short of stature, and a rather plain-looking, heavy-set girl, she was nevertheless full of fun. Her charm captured the heart of John Kottinger, a graduate of the University of Vienna, although she herself could not read or write.

Brought up in the Spanish tradition of gracious hospitality, she was taught to oversee the household servants but never cooked or cleaned herself. The new ranch life demanded she do the chores with her own hands until the local Indians could be trained. She faced a rigorous routine of daily bread-baking, butter-churning, tending garden and chickens, and washing clothes in cold streams.

Settlers in the area, including the Kottingers, were often under attack by renegade Indians, and later, bandits gave Pleasanton its reputation as "The Most Desperate Town of the West."

Soon after she arrived, the first of eleven children was born in the adobe home; two died in infancy.

Maria's generous, good nature is exemplified by the fact that she was personally responsible for checking the spread of smallpox among local Indians who succumbed easily to the white man's disease. She vaccinated the well Indians by a primitive method that was both distasteful and dangerous to her own health, scraping infected pustules to obtain the material needed for serum.

With the successful cattle and crop-raising of the Kottinger ranch, and the profitable sale of over half the original 4500 acres, Maria's later life was comfortable and luxurious, typified by her gold opera glasses and diamond earrings.

Maria Kottinger was one of the first of many strong pioneer women who played a significant part in the making of a good life for the heirs of this broad valley.

Maid of Dublin contest begins

DUBLIN — The Dublin Chamber of Commerce is now taking applications for the Maid of Dublin 1975 contest.

The new Maid will be the 14th young woman to wear the crown. Current title-holder is Donna Julson.

Entrants must be no less than 17 nor more than 25 years of age by August 1, 1975. The contest is open to young women from Dublin and South San Ramon.

Contest organizers have stipulated that contestants must maintain a B average in classes enrolled. Judging will be on beauty of face and figure, poise and personality. No talent performance is required. Contestants will appear in swim suit and evening gown competition.

An entirely new format is planned for this year's contestants. All will be treated to a 'finishing school cram course' with classes tentatively scheduled in the following subjects;

Pottery and macrame, Helen Crosbie; auto clinic, Bob Edgecomb; modeling, Nita Edgecombe; dough art, Charlotte Gardner; singing lessons, Marla Johnson; facial and makeup, Linda Michaels; needlepoint, Phyllis Nelson; color analysis, Shirley Pielstick; plastics, Karen Richardson; bread making, Uwarda Smellie; ceramics, Debra Van Fleet; hair styling, instructor to be announced; acrylic painting, Sharon Edgecomb.

Each girl will also receive one month's free treatments and figure analysis, courtesy of the Grecian Health Spa, Dublin. Each contestant will also be given an authentic Irish costume to wear throughout the Spring Festival. Culmination of instruction and fun will be with the Maid of Dublin Pageant at Castlewood Country Club on March 21.

A free trip to Southern California is among the prizes to be awarded to the young woman named Maid of Dublin. Prizes will also include gifts from local merchants and cash.

Applications may be picked up at the Chamber of Commerce office, 7996 Amador Valley Blvd., Dublin. Deadline for application return is Jan. 24.

BE a registrar

Have you ever wanted to become a deputy registrar? Now is your chance.

Tomorrow, Jan. 6, at 7:30 p.m. the League of Women Voters will sponsor a class for anyone who would like to be a voter registrar. It will be held at the Crestwood Lodge, 35 Fenton St., Livermore.

Folk dancing class

A new series of folk dancing classes will be taught by Millie vonKonsky beginning Wednesday, Jan. 8 at the Shannon Recreation Center in Dublin. Classes will be from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m.

The basic dance patterns of the polka, schottische and waltz will be taught along with non-partner dances from Greece, Israel and the Balkans and contemporary round dances.

New students receive their instruction in the early part of the evening. The second half of each session is devoted to intermediate review and fun dancing. Pupils need not have partners to enroll.

Cost for the eight lessons is $8 and registration may be made at Valley Community Service District's recreation center during the day or at the first class.

Mrs. vonKonsky is assisted by her husband, Vern. An experienced teacher, she has conducted many workshops and taught rhythmic activities, including folk dance and movement exploration, in the parochial schools of Oakland.

Burglarproof lesson given

All Valley Women are invited to learn about burglary prevention on Tuesday, Jan. 7 when a speaker from the Livermore Police Department talks with the Livermore Y Wives from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. in the Recreation Center at 8th and H Streets, Livermore.

Play school is available for children ages two months through six years for all "Y" Wives meetings. Reservations for play school must be made with Terri Foster, 447-6388 before 2 p.m. on the Monday prior to the meeting.

SACBOR women to hear Kay Cushing

Dublin attorney Kay Cushing will be the speaker when the SACBOR Women's Council holds its luncheon meeting on Wednesday, Jan. 8 at the Elegant Ranch in Hayward.

Her topic will be "Rental Laws Pertaining to the Single Family Dwelling."

'Bad' Cowboys still cream Canyon

BY MIKE ZAMPA

Successful teams win even when they're bad, and that's just what Livermore High was early Friday night — bad.

The Cowboys staggered and stammered to a 24-15 first quarter lead over lowly Canyon High before blowing the Cougars away, 83-51 in non-league basketball.

Obviously creaky after a week's holiday layoff, Livermore committed seven turnovers in the first quarter, and 16 in the opening half.

Despite an almost illegal heighth advantage, the Cowboys nearly found themselves rebounded in those opening minutes.

But when you're 10-2 you've gotta have some talent. And Livermore remained afloat on that alone until midway through the second period. Then things fell into place and the Cowboys were joy-riding to their ninth consecutive pre-season win.

The victory was not unexpected. Canyon has won just once this season, and one of its top scorers, Marvin Bowerman, was suffering through a four-point night.

But in the larger picture, Livermore's entire exhibition schedule has been startling. The Cowboys are rated among the East Bay's top 15 teams, when at the first of the year, no one was sure Livermore was still playing the sport.

They had one returning player, Ed St. Clair, and one tall player, Ed St Clair. Folks decided the entire season would be devoted to his personal acheivement.

But the Cowboys are a team now, and ready to challenge in their own EBAL. They open Friday night with defending champion Amador Valley.

"Amador is in a class by itself," says Livermore coach John Jones. "But we just might give them a battle."

To Jones, Livermore's success has not been startling

"We had five or six kids who played a lot of basketball this summer, and they know each other pretty well," he pointed out. "And Ed is a great player."

St. Clair scored 16 points, hauled down a game-high 12 rebounds, and dished off some fine assists in the win over Canyon Friday. For one of the few times in the last two seasons, he was out-scored by a teammate. Reserve forward Kurt Graver tallied 18.

Still it was St. Clair who carried the Cowboys with nine first quarter points. His outlet passes were the key to Livermore's improving fast break.

"Evcrybody just thinks a great player naturally plays well all the time," Jones said afterwards. "But Ed works hard and he concentrates really well. I hate to play against a team with a super player like that when he's going well."

The Cowboys' heighth superiority over the Cougars was emphasized in one telling statistic. Livermore turned offensive rebounds into field goals nine times.

Rich Stewart, who scored 16 points and had 10 rebounds, accounted for eight of his points with follow up shots.

"Stewart's been playing well," Jones complimented. "He's getting better all the time. And Ted Wood is doing a really good job at guard for us. He's better than what we had last year. In fact we've got better material overall than we had last year."

Wood scored just four points in the Cowboys' exhibition finale. But he stole the ball three times and conspired with St. Clair on three breath-taking assists.

Canyon guard Jeff Barnes led all scorers with 25 points. In the Cougars' system, he is the depository for the entire offense.

Livermore on the other hand spread the scoring on a wider basis than it has all year. With Joe Volponi scoring 10, the Cowboys placed four players in double figures.

Valley cagers sweep

Sharp AV tips SL five

The Amador Valley Dons played a near-flawless first half Friday night to handle the San Leandro Pirates 71-45.

The win brought the Dons final pre-season mark to 11-3.

The game's only tie was at two — after that the Dons practically scored at will.

Jeff Hine, perhaps most consistent of the Dons scorers led with 17 while Andy Finn, showing few affects of his long layoff dumped in 16 in his second real game of the season. Phil Hansen was the third Don in double figures with 14.

The Pirates Dave Dalton paced the game with 22 points as teammate Jay Anema added 10. San Leandro's usually high-scoring backcourt man was held to just four points.

With the larger Amador squad employing a zone press, the Pirates quickly fell behind 31-7 after the first quarter.

After the early deadlock, Amador ripped off 12 unanswered points to take command of the contest 14-2. Hine tallied all but six of his points in the initial stanza while Hansen pitched in with eight.

After the Bucs rudely interupted with a basket at the 4:50 mark, Amador took off on another streak to lead 20-4. Moments later the Dons whipped off a 11-2 string to all but officially win the tilt.

Mercifully, Amador coach Skip Mohatt began to make wholesale substitutions which enabled the usually competent (9-3) hosts from being run out of their own gym.

The Dons also copped the JV quarterback led with 18 points. Jim Schmidt disturbed the cords for 12 markers.

Lancers fall to Dublin

The Dublin High basketball team forced Tennyson's Lancers into a dozen turnovers in a row Friday night to come away with a lopsided 75-60 home victory in the pre-season finale for the Gaels. It was the second win for the Gaels over Tennyson this season as Dublin beat the Lancers to take third place in last week's JFK tourney.

Tennyson commited 38 turnovers in the contest as Dublin upped its exhibition record to 7-5. The game was never close after the Gaels got off to a 19-12 first quarter lead.

Kevin Bowers was at the top of his usually fine form hitting 12 field goals on his way to 29 points. Many were on wide-open shots, however as the Gaels' Doug Adams put the clamps on the lanky forward much of the game.

The Gaels assured themselves of the win in the third period when the Lancers went a full 4:45 without even attempting a field goal against the hustling Dublin defense

Ray Roberson led the Gaels with 17 points as he shot a scorching 58 per cent from the field. Kory Porter led the Gaels to a fine 19 of 24 night at the line as he scored 12, including eight without a miss from the free throw line.

Dublin bested Tennyson 44-35 in field goal percentage and commited 26 turnovers themselves.

Granada doubles Marina

More than doubling the score of their undersized opponents, the Granada Matadors ripped the visiting Marina Titans 73-34 Friday night.

The Matadors' only problem was a meager 36 per cent free throw average. However, coach Pat Fracisco's crew more than made up for their ineptitude at the charity stripe with a 54 per cent field goal night (32-59).

Granada amassed the numerous free throws not by any deliberate roughouse tactics on the part of Marina but rather by Marina's lack of organization. The Titans in addition to fulfilling the old cliche "falling all over each other", fell all over the Mats; commiting nine shooting fouls in the last quarter alone.

The Mats sported a balanced scoring attack as eight players tallied and four reached double figures.

Scott Campbell led with 17, brother Dave and Joey Wujek fired in 14 and Lee Brennan hit for 13.

The Titans still had hope after the first 16 minutes as Granada led by 'just' 13, 30-17. But the second half was owned by the hosts as the Mats outscored Marina 24-7 in the final period alone.

The Titans scored just two field goals in the last stanza, one by Jerry Halliday, who tied with Frank Pauselius for the losers lead with eight points, the other by Litunchuck.

The victory leaves the Mats with a 7-4 final non-league record.

Wolves dawdle awhile, unlock Mt. Eden's zone to win, 62-48

By TED BROCK

After dawdling away several chances to take control of the game, San Ramon High picked apart Mt. Eden High's zone defense midway through the third quarter and walked off with a 61-47 non-league basketball victory in Danville Friday night.

It was the fifth straight win for the Wolves, who enter Tuesday night's East Bay Athletic League opener against Monte Vista with a 8-3 preseason record.

"It feels good to look up and see a 12-14 point lead," San Ramon guard Ed Aitken enthused afterwards.

"We're getting the idea that we can blow somebody out. Our game with San Lorenzo (a week earlier) was what turned things around," Aitken added.

Mt. Eden spent the first half recovering from several four-point deficits, and two unanswered buckets in the last minute before intermission brought the Monarchs even with the Wolves at 24.

Mt. Eden resumed play in the second half with an even more aggressive combination of a half court zone press, then falling into a tight 2-3 and denying San Ramon any good offensive mobility. In turn, the Monarchs went to the offensive boards with a burst of playground vigor and found themselves leading, 34-26, when Al Reiger hit a tip-in with 5:15 to go in the third quarter.

The Wolves called time out, and returned to live action with a 15-5 spurt that put them up, 41-39, at the end of three periods.

The fourth quarter was 20-8, San Ramon, as Fisher and center Don Krueger each contributed three field goals. Krueger's were all well-timed tip-ins, two coming on softly caroming Fisher jump shots.

Krueger's defensive work against the taller Rick Grier, as well as his hustle on the offensive boards, were the main ingredients which made this his best game of the season. Ten points, seven rebounds, five assists.

Wolf coach John Clawson acknowledged his club's steady improvement over the pre-season, but wouldn't speculate on its chances when league play opens this week.

"I'm very anxious for it to begin," he said. "It's hard to tell in advance how the different teams will do. Records are deceptive, because some schedules may be more difficult than others."

(As in the case of Monte Vista, left with a pre-Christmas nightmare by now-departed Ray Crawford, this year's schedule maker. The Mustangs, 4-7 going into Saturday night's pre-season finale with Newark-Memorial, played eight games in one 12-day stretch during December.)

The Fisher-Krueger fourth-quarter burst, punctuated by a pair of Jim Kaldem free throws, staked the Wolves to a 55-41 lead with 1:15 to play.

Clawson called on his cleanup committee — Barry Buckkley, Scott MacDonald, George Pehanick, Mike Zilvestris, and Mike Lucas — and the SR played Mt. Eden's weary regulars to a 6-6 tie the rest of the way.

McAdoo leads NBA vote

NEW YORK (AP) — Center Bob McAdoo of the Buffalo Braves, the second leading scorer and rebounder in the National Basketball Association, drew the most votes in fan balloting for the league's All - Star Game, to be played Jan. 14 at Phoenix, Commissioner Walter Kennedy announced Saturday.

The agile, 6-foot-10, 23-year-old McAdoo received 98,325 votes in the balloting, easily winning the starting center job for the Eastern Conference team in the Jan 14 game in Phoenix.

Joining McAdoo in the East's opening lineup will be forwards John Havlicek of Boston and Elvin Hayes of Washington, and guards Walt Frazier and Earl Monroe, both of New York.

The West's starting lineup will be composed of forwards Rick Barry of Golden State and Spencer Haywood of Seattle, center Kareem Abdul - Jabbar of Milwaukee, and guards Gail Goodrich of Los Angeles and Nate Archibald of Kansas City - Omaha.

Each team will have seven additional players, making a total of 12 for each squad. The reserves will be chosen by the coaches in each conference.

The coaches for the East and West will be officially announced Wednesday. They will be chosen on the basis of the conference standings as of Monday, with the coaches whose teams have the best records getting the assignments.

Al Attles of the Warriors has already clinched the Western conference job.

This was the first time that the fans were allowed to vote for the starting lineups. The closest balloting was for the second guard position on the East team, with Monroe edging Boston's Jo Jo White by about 3,300 votes.

Frazier was the second leading vote-getter, attracting 91,621 ballots. Abdul - Jabbar received the most votes for the West, receiving 77,832 votes, beating Detroit's Bob Lanier, the most valuable player in last season's game, for the starting center berth. Lanier collected 65,917 votes.

McAdoo played only 13 minutes in his first All - Star appearance last season as the West won 134 - 123 at Seattle. Despite the setback, the East still leads the series 15-9.

Coryell named Coach of Year

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Don Coryell, who turned the dispirited St. Louis Cardinals from perennial losers into divisional champions, was named 1974 National Football League Coach of the Year yesterday by the Associated Press.

The 50-year-old Coryell was a landslider winner, receiving 50 of a possible 78 votes from a national panel of sports writers, including three representatives from each of the NFL's 26 teams.

Sid Gillman of the Houston Oilers finished a distant second with 12 votes. Lou Saban of Buffalo, Chuck Fairbanks New England and John Madden of Oakland also collected votes.

Coryell, in his second season as coach, led the Cardinals to their first division title since the franchise was moved from Chicago to St. Louis in 1960 and their first since 1948.

The Cardinals, who had finished the 1971, 1972 and 1973 seasons with identical 4-9-1 records, wound up 10-4 last season and tied Washington for first place in the National Football Conference East Division.

St. Louis was declared the division champion by virtue of two victories over the Redskins.

Coryell had compiled a 23-5-1 record at Whittier from 1957-59 and a remarkable 104-19-2 record at San Diego State from 1961-1972.

On taking the St. Louis job, he said, "I believe in winning games by going out and scoring touchdowns."

"The only way you can beat a superior opponent," he added, "is by throwing the ball." So the Cardinals emphasized a passing attack, the quickest way to score, but a contradiction of the NFL success formula.

The result was a dismal failure, the Cardinals finishing fourth in the five - team NFC East in 1973.

This season Coryell switched the emphasis from offense to defense, and the offensive formula from passing to a diversified attack, and the results were startling. St. Louis won its first seven games and finished with 10 victories, the first time the team had won that many games since moving to St. Louis.

"It's a different ball game now," explained linebacker Larry Stallings. "Last year 1973, Coryell came into the league believing he could score 40 points on anybody and, of course, that's not how you play football anymore, not how you win.

"You win with defense, by not giving up the ball, not throwing interceptions," continued Stallings. "I think he realized he had to run the ball, keep it away from the other team. That's what he did. We threw only 11 passes in a game against Cleveland. In 1973, we threw that many in one period."

Kathy and Mike tops

Those two were top point-getters for the boys and girls teams this past swim season.

Girls placing in the top 10 were; Katie Fleischer, Denise Knauer, Norma Fernandes, Michelle McAllister, Kaye Fernandes, Sandi Antone, Nann White, Angela Antone and Missy Bota.

Top 10 boys included; David Bowker, Steve Pratuch, David Daniels, Dan Knauer, Brian Story, Jim Silk, Tom Wilson, Jeff Yssels and Jim Borree.

Catfish an omen of pollution?

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Catfish Hunter may have been the only free - agent fish in the sea this time, but major league baseball owners say a school of such free agents would pollute baseball's waters permanently.

However, Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, says the owners' position is just a red herring.

Hunter's case, in which he was declared a free agent by an arbitration panel, seriously romanced by more than 20 baseball teams and eventually signed to a reported $3.75 million contract Tuesday night by the New York Yankees, is unique.

Baseball owns a Congressional exemption from the federal anti- trust laws. Written into every player contract is a reserve clause that binds a player to one team unless he is traded or released.

An arbitration panel ruled Dec. 16 that Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley had breached Hunter's contract, allowing the free enterprise system to run its course.

Last Friday night, an Alameda County Superior Court judge upheld the arbitration panel's decison in favor of Hunter.

But the panel didn't touch on the reserve clause. It only came down hard on owners who violate their players' contracts, Finley's refusal to pay a $50,000 deferred payment to hunter in the stipulated manner being the basis for the decision.

"Finley broke the contract. It was a one - shot case," says Gaylord Perry, a hunting buddy of Hunter's and the Cleveland Indians' ace pitcher. "I've had deferred payments in my contracts. My employers just didn't renege."

Perry joined two of Cleveland's biggest bigwigs in traveling to the offices of Hunter's lawyers in little Ahoskie, N.C., to offer the 1974 American League Cy Young Award winner a fat contract. The Cleveland hunting party was one of a dozen contingents that made personal visits to try and land baseball's most celebrated free agent.

Baseball executives say these strange odysseys and the astronomical money packages being offered indicate what would happen if the lid was taken off the reserve clause.

"I think what's happening here manifests why we are so cautious about changing the reserve clause," said San Diego Padres' Vice President and General Manager Peter Bavasi. "No reserve clause would mean 200 Ahoskies.

"Baseball operates in 24 markets," Bavasi adds. "For the game to be successful in all those markets, the teams must be competitive. Without a reserve clause, only the richest clubs could afford to offer top players big salaries."

Miller said Bavasi "... obviously didn't learn anything about economics."

Miller said Hunter's free agency is not destructive at all, and anyone who says it is, is practicing "economic idiocy."

"The Hunter case establishes zero about what would happen in a free market," Miller says. "Here we had a supply of one and a demand of 24. Obviously, when the supply is at one and the demand is great, prices will go up dramatically."

Gabe Paul, president of the Yankees who twice traveled to Ahoskie and eventually hooked the Catfish, says the baseball world would be chaotic without a reserve clause.

"I think this strengthens the understanding of the reserve clause and what could happen without it," Paul says. "There would be pandemonium."

"Not all 24 clubs will be able to compete on an equal footing," says Yankee Executive Vice President Tal Smith. "You would have a situation where your top performers, the superstars and all - stars, would command the bulk of money available for salaries.

"I think the superstars would be congregated on a few prosperous clubs. There would be a deterioration of competition and sooner or later, the ball game is over."

Miller says when these doomsayers raise "the straw man or bogey man of no rules at all, they are raising a phoney issue. Except for the owners, no one is suggesting no rules at all.

"Possibilities can be worked out," Miller says, "that fall far short of lifetime control. There are numerous possibilities for meaningful change with equities preserved on both sides. We could limit the number of years before a player could become a free agent or limit the number of free agents a club could sign.

"If the owners will sit down and talk about it, we could create some modifications where everybody isn't on the open market every year."

Miller also discounts the nontion that the best players would gravitate to the wealthiest clubs and the biggest cities.

"It's a myth that there are poor and rich clubs in baseball," Miller says. "Baseball owners are all multi - millionaires. There are no poor ones . . ."

Miller's arguments haven't convinced baseball Commissioner powie Kuhn, however.

"I do feel the reserve system is necessary," Kuhn says. "The present system has developed over almost a century of experience, and I believe that as it has evolved, it is fair to both players and clubs."

Boumann fund set up

A memorial fund has been established at First National Bank in Pleasanton for the family of Paul Boumann, a coach in the Ballistic Soccer Club who died last Saturday of cancer.

Boumann coached in the Ballistic league for three seasons. He directed an under-14 team at the beginning of this season until forced to step down because of illness.

"He was the kind of guy who if you asked, would always come out to help," said Harry Miller, director of Ballistic's Holiday Soccer Tournament.

Proceeds of that tournament were presented to Boumann's family to defer mountaining medical bills.

"It was our most successful tournament ever, and it couldn't have come at a better time," Miller said.

Boumann, who was 40, left a wife and three children.

LeClaire hopes to run issue-oriented race

HAYWARD — Fifteenth Assembly District candidate Joyce LeClaire kicked off her campaign here Friday morning before a sparsely attended press conference as she pledged an issues oriented race of the state office.

LeClaire, 35, said she had gained a reputation as an "advocate of the people" while serving on the Pleasanton City Council. "It is in that context that I see my role in the Assembly," she said.

That context would be formed in part by establishing two district offices, one in the valley and one in south Hayward fo Union City and Hayward residents.

"My staff will be well qualified and prepared to assist individuals on a highly personalized level," she added.

She also pledged help to agencies and individuals "expedite the long and frustrating process of wading through bureaucratic red tape."

LeClaire said her concerns include the state of the economy.

She also mentioned the "unfair burden" placed on homeowners paying property taxes.

Removing price controls on milk is another step to be taken to aid those hardest hit by the economic slump, she said.

"The status of women is of great concern to me," she said. "True equality under the law is far from a reality in the State of California," LeClaire added.

She said she favored tight controls on major oil companies, would support measures to insure "high quality of education for all children" and would make an attempt to meet as many district constituents as possible.

CTA endorsement to Marc Elliot

Delegates from the local chapters of the California Teachers Association within the 15 Assembly District met Monday, Dec. 30, at Chabot College in Hayward to interview and consider endorsing candidates for the upcoming special primary election Feb. 4. Of the 15 candidates, 13 were interviewed. Each candidate was evaluated on the basis of his or her positions on issues relating to education.

After careful and deliberate consideration at the second all-day session within six months, the delegates endorsed Marc Elliot, Senior Administrative Assistant to the late Speaker Pro TemPore, Assemblyman Carlos Bee.

This action is the voice of the local chapters representing approximately 3,000 teachers withing the 15th District.

LARPD switches meeting date to Jan. 15

LIVERMORE — If you're going to the Livermore Area Recreation and Park District (LARPD) regular monthly meeting Wednesday, hold it.

Don't go until Wednesday the 15th.

The meeting has been postponed a week, because facts and figures due from the county the beginning of the month are not expected to be received in time to get them into the LARPD agenda, which is printed up well in advance of the meeting.

With the holidays thrown in, she said, it's just impossible.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the administration building on Trevarno Road.

Adult education out to meet community needs

Amador Valley Adult Education classes are attempting to meet the current needs of the community according to Mike Connolly, Coordinator of Continuing Education. Evening classes are held at both Amador and Dublin High Schools and some day classes are held throughout the community. Adult Education classes are individualized to fit the needs and speed of the students. Schedules of current classes are avilable in the county libraries in Dublin and Pleasanton.

Business skills offered this quarter at Dublin High School include Bookkeeping. Connie Sheehan has both a beginner and intermediate course in shorthand and students move to the advance class as their speed increases. Both beginning and intermediate typing classes use the electric typewriter. The Dublin campus will offer a consumer course in Real Estate for buyers and seller on Tuesday evenings. The regular Real Estate course for license preparation is offered at Amador High School on Thursday evenings.

Tole and Decorative Art is offered both days and evenings at the Camp Parks by Judy Dygert to over a hundred students. Beginners may register for Monday classes only. Other art and craft classes offered at the Dublin Campus include Sketching and Home Decorative Arts on Mondays, Oil Painting and Pottery on Wednesdays and Photography for beginners on Tuesdays and advanced on Thursdays.

More women are sewing today than ever before and Dublin's Adult Program offers beginning sewing which covers basic skills and making a simple garment on Wednesday evenings. Carolyn Hunt offers a course in sewing on the knit and stretch fabrics for beginners and advanced students on Monday evenings. Jane Workman teaches tailoring to the woman who has her basic sewing skills.

Citizenship classes by Robert Lyons prepares students for their citizenship examination and is offered free of charge.

Physical Fitness classes for men are held on Mondays and Wednesdays in the Dublin High School Gym from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Also of interest to men is the Woodshop class on Monday.

Dublin Chamber to meet

DUBLIN — The Dublin Chamber of Commerce has announced the agenda for their first Board of Directors meeting of 1975, to take place Jan. 6, 7:30 p.m in the Chamber headquarters, 7996 Amador Valley Blvd., Dublin.

The President's report will discuss business promotion, the location of general membership luncheons for the next three months, sponsorship of the Chairman for the Spring Festival, and a communication from Naval Weapons.

Additional director's reports will be submitted on membership, complaints, VCSD, transportation, the greeting committee, and the office report.

The meeting will then be turned over to President-elect George Fallon for discussion of basic ideas for the new year.

Owners with unlicensed dogs beware

Alameda County Animal Control officers are issuing citations to dog owners who have failed to comply with licensing requirements.

Control officer Sgt. James Turner said Friday the program was part of a new effort to license all dogs in unincorporated Alameda County.

Officers are currently returning to homes visited some months ago to determine if dogs have been licensed in accordance with county ordinances.

Dog owners were asked last fall by mail to obtain licenses for their animals.

Those who have failed to license their dogs are being issued citations requiring compliance or a court appearance.

The licenses are still available through the Santa Rita Animal Control Center for $3. There are penalties assessed for licensing animals after the Aug. 15, 1974 deadline.

Century 21 to hold seminar

On January 7, the Century 21 offices in the valley will kick off the New Year with an all day planning and education seminar.

All of the agents with Century 21 are professional agents, who are constantly endeavoring to upgrade their skills to better serve their clients. Some of the subjects to be covered are: financing, community service, and Century 21's nationwide referral service.

County to consider Fallon funds

OAKLAND — The Alameda County Parks Advisory Commission will consider requests for funds for preservation of the George Fallon home.

The commission meets Jan. 9 at the Alameda County Administration Building, fifth floor conference room at 3:30 p.m.

The Foothill Road house was the home of early valley settler George Fallon.

The commission will also consider a request from the county board of supervisors to designate the Ravenswood House in Livermore a historical landmark.

Latin-style Gospel group in Livermore

The "King Conquerors" from Manteca will be singing at Calvary Temple, 2200 Arroyo Road, Livermore on Sunday at 6 p.m.

The "King's Conquerors" are seven talented young Christians presenting Gospel music in the Latin style with a modern overtone. The group organized to communicate the Gospel story in a musical style that is understood by today's as well as yesterday's teens.

The group's vibrant and sincere style is every bit as appealing in Spanish as it is in English. Guitar rhythms and colorful harmonies accent inspired singing.

Volunteers needed for new project

Valley volunteers are needed for a new mental health project just getting underway.

The Mental Health Association's new program will help residents of the Eden health district, in the Hayward area, but volunteers from all over the area are needed, said a spokesman for the Mental Health Association of Alameda County.

The volunteers will go through a free six - week intensive training program so they can help mentally disturbed clients with such everyday problems as income, housing, medical and psychiatric care, jobs and social needs.

Investment class starting next week

Even in these times of recession or inflation, it is possible to save money, and to have that money make more money. That is the message of a new, 6 - week class in investment and finance planning being taught in the Amador Valley Adult Education Program.

The course will be taught by Jerry Wilfley, Thursday, 7 - 10 p.m., starting January 9 at Amador High School. Register by attending the first class session.

This is one of a dozen new classes offered for the winter term by the adult education program. To register, simply attend the first class session.

Tuition is $4 per person per course.

Livermore sets public hearings

LIVERMORE — The city will hold two public hearings on Jan. 9 and Jan. 20 (at the city council meeting) at 8 p.m. in the Municipal Court Chambers, 39 So. Livermore Ave., to discuss the Housing and Community Development needs of the area.

The hearing is to consider priorities for allocating approximately $103,000 of a total city allocation over three years of $622,000.

Citizen participation is required by law and encouraged by city officials. Participants from incorporated and unincorporated areas near Livermore are invited to attend.

An Editorial

Pro sports versus the poor working man

There are those — particularly within the closed cartel of hard - core fans and sports writers — who suggest that Jim Hunter's multi million dollar contract with the New York Yankee baseball organization "is a great victory for the little man." This is one journalist who believes little people are getting skewered on the spigot of professional sports. We think it's time somebody turned down he flame.

The naive idea that "it's none of the public's business what a team owner pays his players" has of course been lost in a great amalgam of new stadia, special freeway accesses and public transportation systems, all built at public expense to assure the financial success of "the home town team." When that success slips below a pre - determined level, the public either ponies up a handsome subsidy, or the team moves on to some other city, where the subsidy is greener. Even the Congress of the United States has several times stated, and the Supreme Court has agreed, that professional sports is much less an exercise in free enterprise than it is a sort of national pastime, an essential safety valve in the pressure cooker of one busy nation's more mundane pursuits.

(We will all recall how professional football determined that its particular entertainment was needed even during a weekend of national and world mourning for a president just assassinated. The games came first; the funeral followed.)

A decade ago Alameda County was hit with the rather flamboyant idea of building a vast sports complex, to be underwritten by taxpayers throughout the county and operated for the exclusive use of professional sports. This newspaper was almost alone in protesting that move; not because we weren't delighted at the prospect of bringing "big time baseball and football to the East Bay," but rather because we found nothing in common between those business ventures and the taxpayers' obligation to underwrite their success. The fact that the Oakland - Alameda County Coliseum has recently become financially solvent does nothing to change that argument, particularly when that complex might still become a tax drain should one or more of those franchises pull out.

We are less concerned right now with the charity of a Charles Finley versus the popularity of a James Hunter than we are frightened at the prospect of sports - loving millionaires making millionaires out of players. while the public stands innocently by waiting for the word on higher ticket prices, a larger tax - subsdidized stadium, or some other city inducement "to keep this home town franchise from going broke, or going elsewhere."

Even apart from all that high finance, there is something basically wrong about one man being paid $800,000 for a year's work that covers never more than nine months, and less than 30 hours of hard labor in any one of those months. That is hardly a pattern to encourage the rest of us working slobs to "tighten our belts and make do with less during this period of recession."

Those noble goals get fogged up by the cloud of high finance whereby insurance magnates and broadcast networks dabble in professional sports, guaranteed a profit by the taxpayer and the Supreme Court, or allowed to write off their losses at the nation's expense. Either this is one game we should all learn to play, or somebody had best write a new set of rules.

Firstbank caution on gold

First National Bank of Pleasanton has joined that growing list of financial institutions which choose not to dabble in gold, and will advise its customers along that same cautious path.

"We do not believe the purchase of gold by small, private investors to be in the best interests of the investor, the banking system or the economy of the country," states Firstbank president Warren Harding in a statement on that policy. He notes further that "gold pays no interest or dividends, and is subject to wide fluctuations in price, making it a particularly hazardous form of investment."

Small investors who do choose to withdraw funds to purchase gold will further depreciate the economy because such action "will remove funds previously available for loans to individuals and businesses for productive purposes. This would probably tighten credit further, sending interest rates upward again and make loans more difficult to obtain, particularly in the hard pressed housing industry," Harding concludes.

The baby boom is over

DURING THE 1960s, the population bulge caused by the post - World War Two "baby boom" increased the number of Americans between ages 14 and 24 by 13.8 million.

Current projections are that the growth in this age group in the decade of the 70s will be only 600,000 and may even decrease in the 1980s.

Just as the burgeoning numbers of youth in the 1960s spurred the expansion and development of che educational community, the sharp decline in their numbers will also create unprecedented challenges and opportunities.

SO ARGUES Caryl P. Haskins, former president of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, writing in a special issue of Daedalus magazine devoted to the crisis in higher education. The journal is published by the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

"We have a tremendous resource borne by the tide of those years (the '60s)," he says. "We had better be sure that it is used."

One group that might still benefit from a refocussed educational system, he suggests, is "that substantial part of the legion of the 14 - to 24 - year - old sector, whirled in the currents of the Sixties and most especially Vietnam," that lost its normal opportunities for higher education and has now dispersed into the body of our citizenry.

FOR THEM, Haskins envisions an "Open University," with unconventional kinds of accreditation and certification using new technological devices.

Increasing the student - teacher ratio may be another opportunity created by the shifting demographics of higher education.

The number of required teachers should drop through the '70s and '80s. "But," says Haskins, "There are going to be many teachers preparing and maturing and eager to make instruction their life's work during those decades."

The week in retrospect . . .

Special Education's plan

On Tuesday, January 21, the boards of trustees for the Amador Valley Joint High School District and Pleasanton Joint Elementary School District will meet in joint session to discuss the Special Education Master Plan.

The session at the new District Education Center is besides the monthly meetings of the two boards, which are set for Jan. 8 (Pleasanton Elementary) and Jan. 14 (Amador).

Because of the potential import of this meeting, it might behoove parents of students as well as the candidates for the respective boards in the March elections to be present.

Special education classes, as defined in the district's instructional policies, includes education of mentally gifted, physically handicapped, educationally handicapped, and mentally retarded minors who can profit more from the instruction in such special education classes.

The instructional policy definition also states that "opportunity classes may be established for students who are habitually truant, irregular in attendance, or when behavior is disorderly."

Special education may also include a vocational education program, summer vocational ed, Regional Occupation program and continuation education.

All listed are presently a part of either the Amador or Pleasanton special sevvices and classes.

The educators most directly involved with these programs on a day-to-day basis are Director of Secondary Education Neil Sweeney, Director of Elementary Education Carl Krause, Sandy Sandoval in "voc ed" program, Roy Isler in ROP and principals of the respective schools.

It will be these men that the trustees will rely heavily upon in reviewing where the district is and whether it is following the proscribed path to proper and realistic goals.

Looking at these classes from the broad view, it is to the credit of Education that the "special child" has been brought into focus over the past decade.

For too many years, the retarded or gifted child, the student with particular vocational interests was ignored or afforded a few minutes at the end of the day, usually so the vast mainstream of students could get an assembly line education that all too often was insufficient.

Now we take heed, or so we try in word and action, of the youth slowed by physical or mental handicaps, the student who stays in school because of a particular vocational interest or the precocious youngster yearning for greater challenges.

As a former teacher who became acquainted with physically retarded children at an elementary school in the San Lorenzo School District, I found that there are no barriers to a child's educational growth when the curriculum and teachers present a totally-positive picture.

So it becomes important that a district pay great attention to WHO presents the curriculum as well as what is presented.

Every parent who has, or might have, a youngster in one of these programs should be vitally concerned with the master plan. The trustees and administration will be dealing not only with philosophy and goals, but the week-to-week curriculum and manner of presentation.

While a master plan is essentially a guide, and not a strict, unwavering compass, it nonetheless "tells" the administrator and teacher the general directions in which to proceed.

It is at this point, then, that the parent and/or interested observer can step forward with his input.

It could be of immersurable value to each and everyone of us in the future.

Our representatives

The most effective way for valley citizens to make their opinions known on issues affecting them at the local, state or federal level is to write the politician directly involved. Below is a list of the representatives for the valley area with their addresses.

Due to reapportionment that will take effect in California on January 1, 1975, some state assemblymen and senators that now officially represent the valley will not do so at the first of the year. The election in November will determine the representatives in the new alignment and it is those politicians that are listed below.

UNITED STATES SENATORS

Senator Alan Cranston (Democrat), Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C., 20510.

Senator John V. Tunney (Republican), Senate Office Building, Washington D.C., 20510.

UNITED STATES REPRESENTATIVE

Representative Fortney (Pete) Stark (Democrat, 9th district), 1034 Longworth Building, Washington D.C., 20515.

CALIFORNIA STATE SENATORS

Alameda County

Senator John Holmdahl (Democrat, 8th district), State Capitol, Room 4057, Sacramento 95814, (916) 445-6671. In Oakland, 1111 Jackson St., Oakland 94607, 464-0863.

Contra Costa County

Senator John Nejedly (Republican, 7th district) State Capitol, Room 5091, Sacramento 95814, (916) 445-6083. In Walnut Creek, 1393 Civic Drive, Walnut Creek 94596, 934-4558.

CALIFORNIA ASSEMBLYMEN

Contra Costa County

Assemblyman Dan Boatright (Democrat, 10th district), State Capitol, Room 4017, Sacramento 95814, (916) 445-8528. In Concord, Suite 620, 1035 Detroit Avenue, Concord 94518, 689-1973.

COUNTY SUPERVISORS

Mobile homes and taxes

Is the present statutory treatment of mobile homes fair to mobile homeowners? That question along with the controversy over the existing methods of taxation of mobile home dwellers, lending practices and the rights of mobile home purchasers versus conventional homes, as well as the rights of mobile home tenants versus apartment dwellers, is covered in an article in the November Stanford Law Review.

It's author, James F. Vernon concludes that current laws covering these subjects are based upon an outdate conception. He says "What is needed is legislative acceptance of a new conception of such homes based upon their function as permanent family dwellings. This new approach corresponds more closely to the role mobile homes have assumed in the housing market and can result in more equitable treatment of mobile home owners."

Vernon's approach to the issue of mobile homes is refreshing. So far most of the controversy has centered on whether or not mobile homeowners are paying their fair share of taxes for the support of local government.

He gives that problem only brief treatment as incidental to the overall problems of inequity, pointing out that present taxation of such homes stems from the house trailers, capable of being towed behind the family car. Because they were regularly on the highways for vacations or use by transient workers, they came under vehicle regulations and were taxed as such. Currently they are still subject to vehicle registration, in lieu fees and sales tax in the manner of vehicles.

Without getting into the debate as to whether the mobile home owner pays his fair share of local taxes, Vernon says that "horizontal equity can best be achieved through taxing homes as conventional dwellings." Since mobile homes are rarely on the highways, license fees should be eliminated and such movements be required to pay only the special fee as in the case of all other non-vehicle highway moves. "By eliminating the role of tax collector from Motor Vehicles the need for registration disappears." He also contends the sales tax should apply to the builder for materials used rather than the sale to the owner.

Vernon is far more concerned with the application of other laws to mobile homes because of the vehicle concept. Unlike other homes, the mobile home is subject to the financing charges and repossession standard in auto purchases. Such home dwellers do not have the protection afforded conventional home owners from mortgage foreclosures. The mobile home can be simply moved away without notice to the owner under a repossession.

Vernon's article provides ample thought provocation in relation to present laws governing mobile homeowners which stress the need for changes to protect the mobile homeowners as well as to establish equity in the law between them and the conventional homeowner.

But, as Vernon suggests, "Recognition of mobilé homes as permanent family dwellings would call for extensive changes in their statutory treatment . . ." in all areas including the question of taxation.

Reader raps alcohol as menace

Editor, The Times:

A week ago you ran a narrative about a friend of yours whose son was addicted to drugs. It was a good article and pointed out the seriousness and tragedy of drug abuse. Neither your friend nor you could pinpoint the cause of the young man's problem. It would be presumptuous of me to say I know the cause, but it is my belief that a great part of the problem lies in the attitude that society has towards drugs. (And alcohol is certainly a drug!) This attitude — a flippant, "drink up and have fun" attitude — was expressed on the front page of your newspaper today ("Banish the Bubbles, etc.").

This article humorously indicated the danger of alcohol and then went on to show how one could indulge — or more appropriately, over - indulge — in alcoholic beverages and then make things tolerable in the morning by taking certain precautions against a hangover. If a young person sees an article like this he might be apt to say, "That's one more reason to smoke marijuana; it doesn't rot your stomach and it doesn't give you a hangover." And, which attitude would be more correct — the one condoning alcohol or the one for marijuana? I suggest that neither is suitable for our society.

I believe that you could have picked out a more legitimate way to bring 1974 to a close on the front page of your newspaper. Perhaps you could have had an article on the good things of 1974, or an exhortation to the citizens of Pleasanton to start out 1975 with a serious, thoughtful analysis of ways we can make the world a better place to live in — without drugs (and that goes for alcohol!).

Young Dublinite is worried

Editor, The Times:

(The following letter was composed as one valley resident's response to the proposed development of "New Town" north of Livermore.)

Please sir, leave the hills in Dublen alone. Dublen is peaceful enough wethout more houses in Dublen.

Very truly yours

Sound and Fury

Walt Hecox

Scratch one globe trotter, folks. This traveling man stayed home this Christmas vacation. Saving pennies and more important, the lady of the house from a long automobile journey.

Saturday we headed for the Monterey with my step daughter's boy friend and Skeeter's present to me, a new underwater housing for a strobe so the quality of my underwater photography will improve.

Down about 65 feet it gets dark no matter how bright the sunlight. Reds and yellows turn green and blue. Or worse yet, grey. With a strobe they come to life.

My avocation is underwater photography these days. But we did not go under Saturday. Passing Monastery beach on the way to Point Lobos I knew the expedition was doomed when I saw huge combers rolling over the reef by the cliffs.

We parked the car and waited, first in line, for the ranger to arrive at 9 a.m.

She showed up at 8:30 . That's right, my friends. The ranger was a lady.

"I'll have a look at the cove," she said. "But I haven't much hope, not after seeing Monastery. Not much hope at all."

As rangers go she was a comely lass and good natured. She took us with her in her pickup so we could see for ourselves.

Scuba divers are a hardy crew. By then five cars were parked behind us.

Whaler's Cove on Point Lobos is usually a mill pond, but it was a boiling mill pond Saturday. Devastating waves broke over the reef which protects the mouth of the little bay. Pyramids of rock 30 to 50 feet high near the entrance drowned under the damp mountains.

The ranger lady turned the truck in a wide U turn without stopping.

"It would be suicidal," she said.

"It's no mill pond," I agreed.

We stopped at Monastery and Jim and I walked to the crown of the sandy hill which protects that steep beach. We watched a wall of water, far across the bay, sweeping over the rocks.

A wave washed over the rise and chased us to the highway. We returned to watch in awed fascination the overwhelming waves in the distance."

Far out in the bay we saw two waves approaching.

"We'll have to leave when they get here," I told Jim. "The first one is bad. The second worse."

They moved with the wind and against the tide, rising like an angry snake as they approached the shore, the first one seemingly poised in time for a moment, sucking the sea before it into its damp chest, thousands of tons of water staring the crest on the beach eye to eye.

Sea and land met and we ran toward the highway, the water chasing us across the sand. The second wave broke behind it, pouring over the first, deep and moving rapidly over the beach. It chased us past the car and almost to the highway, leaving a two foot river running in the rise between highway and beach."

"Does that do it, Jim?" I asked.

"That does it," he said.

He had been eager to dive and I felt bad for him. But the sea knows no master and is the friend of no man when a high wind is blowing.

Monday and the wind persisted, under clear blue skies, but breathing icicles when we drove past The Brigadoon on the way to the Nut Tree, running from memories of the previous day when we sat high in the Coliseum and watched Johnny Madden's dream of a Super Bowl shattered.

"Isn't that where the famous Alioto meetings are supposed to have taken place?" Skeeter inquired.

I drank Irish stout and ate a Dutch lunch at the Nut Tree. Consumed an entire little loaf of rye bread while Skeeter put away a towering clubhouse with hot soup.

We will pay through the waistline for this holiday season' I will perspire in the gym.

Liverwurst on rye with butter below and creamless horseradish on top. A sandwich for a king if the king has stuffed sinuses. Pastrami with Edam cheese and little cheery tomatoes. The Guiness flows gracefully over salami and cheese.

I have been eating those Dutch lunches for a score of years at the Nut Tree. They never change and I have never lost a pound eating them.

We wandered through all those wonderful, overpriced gifts, hurrying past the candy and bakery goods to the posters and books which fascinate us.

(I sneaked another Lowenbrau Dark while Skeeter went to the powder room. I am not a beer drinker any more but would be if I lived near the Nut Tree. They cool it to the point of freezing and serve it in glasses so cold they will adhere to each other if stored too close together.)

We resisted the books and posters, the pottery and terrariums, a rare day for us. Drove through the darkness to San Ramon, her at the wheel, me in the Land of Nod as we called it when I was wearing a romper suit in Grass Valley.

Tuesday and the wind still screamed through the eaves, howled through the rafters while we drove north to Napa, searching for Jonesy's Famous Steak House, a place highly recommended by one Angie Fanucchi.

"I'll pay for your dinner if you don't like it there," he promised. "You can't miss it. It's right by the airport."

We missed it by 25 miles. How was I to know the Napa airport is closer to Vallejo than Napa? But Skeeter was delighted.

"Oh, good," she remarked. "We're in Yountville. There's a wonderful place called the Vintage House here. I've been wanting to see it for a long time."

So we wandered through the Vintage House, a one time winery in wine country, shop keepers closing their doors as we drew near, reminding us it was New Years Eve and we might lose our reservations at Jonesy's.

We stopped to wet our whistles at a place called the Whistle Stop (sorry, my love, I couldn't resist it) and find the way to Jonesy's Famous (but not exactly easy to find) steakhouse.

The Whistle Stop is a one time railroad station turned into a bar, serving a clientele provided largely by residents at the nearby veterans home as close as I can tell.

They told us how to get to the airport. "And be careful of the Napa police. That town is worse than Morgan Hill," one young fellow warned us.

Morgan Hill was a speed trap 40 years ago. The highway bypasses it now. We found Jonesy's. Angie will not have to pay for dinner. Then back to San Ramon.

As I say, we're not doing much this vacation. Sticking pretty close to home.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't be too lavish with compliments to one who isn't deserving of them. It will make your mate unnecessarily jealous.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You'll pay too little attention to instructions that are given you today. Later, when you follow them, you'll only do half a job.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Lady Luck will not treat you nicely if you gamble on something sight unseen. Look before you leap.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You'll disappoint others and disrupt their plans if you change your mind at the last minute to beg out of something you promised to do.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22) You'll come up with some pretty nifty excuses when explaining to a friend why you didn't get around to a favor she asked of you.

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept 22) You still don't have as tight a grip on your credit card as you should. It's likely your extravagance will gain the upper hand.

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct 23) Tolerance will be required on your behalf at home today or else you'll make issues out of situations that normally wouldn't faze you.

SCORPIO (Oct 24-Nov 22) This is not one of your better days for coming up with bright ideas. Sleep on your thoughts overnight and see how you view them tomorrow.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 23-Dec 21) You don't have sensible sales resistance today. Don't scan the advertisements too closely or you'll make an unwise purchase.

CAPRICORN (Dec 22-Jan 19) Even if you have to squirm a bit while doing it, tell it like it is. A little white lie won't get you off the hot seat.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb 19) Try not to commit yourself now to plans with others too far in advance. Something is coming up and you'll want to have an open schedule.

PISCES (Feb 20-March 20) It's still not wise for you to tell a friend of yours about something your instincts warn you to keep secret.

your birthday

Your Birthday — Jan. 5, 1975
You will undertake an exciting new project this year. The conditions that bring this about will be most unusual and will happen very suddenly.

Registration for Rec Dept. classes starts

Registration for Pleasanton Recreation Department classes will be Jan. 6 through Jan. 10 at the Veterans' Memorial building on Main Street from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Over twenty classes are offered in this section for both adults and children.

Late registration is Jan. 13 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Rec. Dept. office on Bernal Avenue.

Registration is on a first come first serve basis as classes are limited in size. When the maximum has been reached the class will close. After classes have been filled, waiting lists will be kept and new classes will be started when possible.

Advance registration is encouraged as classes with insufficient registration are cancelled in advance of first class session.

No refunds unless the class is cancelled or a refund is requested one week before class starts. A $1.00 service charge will be retained from all refunds except in classes cancelled by the Recreation Department. Pleasanton residents have first preference and non-residents must pay an additional $2.00 for each class.

Seven - pound Peter Karl de Bruin, Valley Memorial's firstborn of the new year, gets his first ride in Dad's arms. Mrs. Lyta de Bruin delivered him at 1:48 a.m. on New Year's morning. The proud pop is Dr. Gerard de Bruin of 2742 Hogan Place, Livermore, a dentist, and little Pete is their fourth child. The couple weren't the first Valley family to have a baby in '75, however; Scherelyn and Craig Jensen of 5260 Norma Way had a son at two minutes past midnight in Kaiser Hospital, Walnut Creek. It's very theoretical Bay Area Sewer Services Agency has pioneered a $22,000 machine that trains waste water treatment plant operators to deal with highly technical problems of processing waste. BASSA trustees Ed Weiss, left and valley representative Ron Hyde inspected the machine with Environmental Protection Agency Manpower Training Director Dr. William Bishop (right). The sewer agency will offer a series of 12 seminars free of charge to local municipalities.

Imagine . . . a lifetime of free checking with no minimum balance to maintain! It sounds too good to be true—but Valley Bank has just opened a new branch office in Pleasanton, and we're making free checking a reality for our customers every day. Just make an initial deposit of $50 and you'll be free of those monthly per-check service charges. The only cost to you is the normal charge for imprinting your checks. The only way you can lose your account is to overdraw—and you can avoid that by taking advantage of our overdraft protection service.

There's another reason why you might want to think about banking with us. We know how busy your workweek can be, so we offer our full range of banking services on Saturday. Lobby and Drive-Up are both open Saturday from 9:00 AM until 12:00 PM. Free Checking for Life and Saturday Banking. Also available at our Livermore and Dublin offices.

Make your Christmas presents now

It's not too soon to start thinking of next year's Christmas presents, especially if you would like to learn how to make unique gifts at low cost. "Creating Jewelry," a new class being offered by the Amador Valley Adult Education Program could solve your giftgiving problems for years to come.

Taught by Rosemary Souza, the course will "explore the basic materials used for jewelry creation," with an emphasis on brass and silver wire, enameling, macrame, and "found objects."

To reserve a spot in the class, register at the first session 7 - 10 p.m., Tuesday.

This is one of a dozen new classes offered for the winter term by the adult education program. To register, simply attend the first classs session.

Tuition is $4 per person per course.

Burglars heist Livermore truck

LIVERMORE — The Livermore City Housing Authority starts 1975 with one less truck in its inventory, according to police.

Someone broke and entered through a window of the authority's 3203 Leahy Way site between Friday evening and Monday morning and stole a 1971 Chevrolet 2-door truck, California license E 586397.

The burglary was discovered by Robert K. Suckling, 51, an employe of the authority.

Not content with breaking a window to gain entry, the burglar or burglars drove through a wooden fence in their haste to escape.

Keys to the vehicle were kept in the ignition.

Seafarer plan

LIVERMORE — Merrill Dean Cox Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Cox Sr. of 284 Anna Maria Street, Livermore, has enlisted for four years active duty in the U.S. Navy under the Seafarer/Airman Program. Cox chose Fireman Apprenticeship and will undergo training in one of over 20 different career fields. In addition to guaranteed apprenticeship training, Cox is also guaranteed the coast of his choice for his initial duty station.

Cox attended Osbourne High School in Manassas, Virginia, prior to moving to California. He is currently undergoing recruit training in San Diego.

Corps award

Marine PFC. Joseph E. Boatright Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe E. Boatwright Sr. of 755 Concord St., Pleasanton, was meritoriously promoted to his present rank upon graduation from the Marine Corps Recruit Depot, San Diego. A meritorious promotion is awarded to individuals, ahead of their normal promotion date, for outstanding performance of duty. Boatright was commended for superioir achievement on the Marine Corps physical fitness test. He scored a perfect 300 points on the test, which consists of situps, pull-ups and a timed three-mile run.

Basic ends

Army Private Derek L. Allman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Wood, 5284 Northway Road, Pleasanton, has completed eight weeks of basic combat training at Ft. Ord , Calif.

Pleasanton kin

Navy Fireman Recruit Ronald L. Stevenson, grandson of Mr. and Mrs. E.G. Stevenson of 3231 Vinyard Ave., Pleasanton, has graduated from recruit training at the Naval Training Center, San Diego.

Boneless Corned Beef and Firm Green Cabbage

Your Choice. . .Shenson's or Safeway

ROUND

*or BRISKET

*Old Fashioned or Plain

lb. $1.19

Serving Suggestion:

CORNED BEEF 'N CABBAGE

3 to 4 Lbs. Corned Beef
1 Large Onion, Quartered
3 Celery Stalks, Cut Up
1 Garlic Clove, Peeled
3 Whole Allspice
4 Pepper Corns
¼ Teaspoon Mustard Seed
1 Bay Leaf
6 Medium Potatoes, Halved
6 Small Whole Onions, Whole
1 Medium Head of Cabbage, Cut into chunks
¾ Lb. Carrots, Cut into Chunks

Place corned beef in large kettle and cover with cold water. Add quartered onions, celery, and seasonings. Bring to boil; reduce heat and simmer 3½ to 4 hours, or until meat is tender. Remove meat and place in warmed oven. Put potatoes, carrots, small whole onions, into corned beef liquid and cook covered until almost tender. Add cabbage and cook until tender. Do not over cook. Drain vegetables and place on platter with corned beef. Serve with horseradish or mustard sauce. 6 Servings.
